

THIS CHANGES EVERYTHING: The Relational Revolution in Psychology—How the Work of Carol Gilligan, Jean Baker Miller, Judith Lewis Herman and Their Colleagues Brought Democracy to Our Personal Lives tells the story of a new relational psychology, born of the human rights movements of the 1960s and 1970s and recounts the untold work of a pioneering group of psychologists, mostly women, who at times took monumental risks, crossing boundaries and breaking institutional taboos, in order to fully understand the ways in which relationships shape us.

“Robb describes theory without didacticism, disentangles misperceptions without condescension, and makes powerful political statements without rancor. Her book is an example of what happens when women have ‘a chance to know themselves, and to be known, not only for what they could be if they acted just like men but also for the culture they carried as women....the intense, emotionally connected cooperation and creativity necessary for human life and growth.’ ”
—Oprah Magazine

Christina Robb wrote for more than 20 years for the Boston Globe, where she shared in a Pulitzer Prize for National Reporting. Educated at Stanford and Oxford, she began research for This Changes Everything, her first book, at the Bunting Institute of Harvard University. Robb lives in Massachusetts with her family.

To order, call the Wellesley Centers for Women Publications Office: 781-283-2510.