Chipamong Chowdhury: great concept, digicomunity

Anja Tiller: Agree with you

Linda Hartling: I love how supportive and encouraging we are when we use new technology!!

Hayal Köksal: In such a financially restricted world it is a lovely occasion for us to be attending the opening ceremony virtually. It must form a good model for all other meetings.

Michael Britton: Yes, Yes! This is a wonderful virtual coming together!! And Uli, you have made so much more possible, you have given pathways for transforming ideas into a real future!!!

Linda Hartling: I love "DIGNICOMMUNITY"!!!

Chipamong Chowdhury: Thanks, Linda (its me Bhante)

Linda Hartling: I'm so glad you could be with us, dear Bhante!!

Gary Jones: the link up fist class and the contents inspiring

Lynn 2: Hi Linda, this is Lynn King (Shanghai)

Linda Hartling: BRAVO to you, dear Uli, for your remarkable leadership on technology!

Hayal Köksal: Brigitte... It is lovely to see you there. Loves from Hayal.

Rosario Galvan: Yes, digicomunity. What about including also etimological meaning of -digit, connected to "fingers", so we extend our reach and touch each other metaphorically. Yes, digital is virtual but also includes somatic empathy, at least with our imagination.

Linda Hartling: Lynn!!! It is GREAT to have you with us!!!

Mara Alagic: Love from Wichita, Kansas, USA

Linda Hartling: Greetings Mara!

Lynn 2: Thrilled to witness this historic moment!

Virginia Swain: somatic empathy--thank you Rosario

Bayezid Dawla: "Communicative dignity"

Linda Hartling: Yes, dear Rosario, we want to extend our reach, our empathic connection!

francisco gomes de matos: thank YOU ULI for , mentioning communicative dignity

Linda Hartling: We are having a WONDERFUL conversation!

Michael Britton: Francisco, I love your phrasing that dignity is the music of equality! so many beautiful words of insight you have made for us!

Linda Hartling: Yes, learning is dignified in itself!

Lynn 2: dignity is a VEHICLE for conscious human evolution

Linda Hartling: Yes, dear Uli, there are so many, many aspects of dignity and humiliation!

francisco gomes de matos: the world needs humanizers and dignifiers. Human RIGHTS for Chipamong Chowdhury: Dignity is essential food for human survival, continuity, peace, love, and tolerance

Linda Hartling: Yes, dear Francisco, we need to encourage more humanizer and dignifiers in the world!

Rosario Galvan: I sense all of us here are connected through an invisible empathic field where we are naturally drawn to the promise of dignity for all. Virginia, how do you think that your mentor Elise Boulding would have liked such a SHARED IMAGE? Thank you Linda to all female pioneers from Wellesley college on women's psychology!

francisco gomes de matos: Global DIGNITY . DIGNITY in the implementation of HUMAN RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES .DIGNITY IS MULTIDIMENSIONAL : there will always be something to probe for the good of Humankind,of human beings,of all beings in Nature

Linda Hartling: Great points about academic world!

Lynn King: just fixed my name here

Chipamong Chowdhury: glad, Lynn King

Linda Hartling: Culture of human rights, yes!

Bayezid Dawla: A culture of dignity needs to be established.

Mara Alagic: culture of human rights!!!

Katrina Vrebalovich: dignity lifts us to be responsible participants in becoming the empowered dreamers and creators of the reality we desire. heart to heart

Hayal Köksal: While mentioning the dignity I also would like to include the challengedf ones...

Takis Ioannides: I salute you all in Oslo, from the sunny Athens city.

Linda Hartling: Greeting Takis!

Virginia Swain: Yes, Rosario, Elise Boulding, professor emeritus Dartmouth left an incredible legacy to us all in her "imaging a possible future" work--and she was born in Norway!

Bayezid Dawla: Dignity is the foundation of human rights.

francisco gomes de matos: since human rights are being so significantly mentioned, let me send you sunniest greetings from the Dom Helder Camara Human Rights Commission, Federal University of Pernambuco, Recife, Brazil

Linda Hartling: Yes, yes, dear Bayezid, the foundation of human rights!

Takis Ioannides: Dignity must be adopted as daily life – action, but first we have to define its real meaning. I very happy I meet you all in the path of my life.

Yves M. Musoni: Yes Linda, Great points about academic world!

Linda Hartling: I couldn't agree with you more, dear Takis, dignity is a daily practice!

Rosario Galvan: We celebrate the humanitarian and creative children that Norway has birthed into the world. Thank you for hosting this trans-boundary event!

francisco gomes de matos: Human rights are embedded in DIGNITY

Bayezid Dawla: THE World Dignity University is expected to play a key role in creating a culture of dignity across the world.

Takis Ioannides: Yes Linda, a daily way of living.

Chipamong Chowdhury: I love the phrase "you can't do alone, you need other" For me, it is Interbeing dependency"

Linda Hartling: That is a good way of putting it, dear Francisco, Human rights are embedded in dignity.

francisco gomes de matos: DIGNITY should be a globally shared RELATIONAL QUALITY vibeke Muasya: As an artist I must tell you all that it's a beautiful event but isn't this what writers and poets and composers DO ???

Hayal Köksal: To training qualified future generations teaching them how to carry dignity in souls is a great responsibility.

Linda Hartling: Together, we can move more and more people toward the shared relational quality of dignity!

Dr. Leo Semashko: Dignity can be only through harmony and in harmony Hayal Köksal: If we are aware of its importance we should take part in the publicity of it. It is a huge responsibility.

Milika Matiti: Milika Matiti: You are very right. Dignity should be embedded in our daily practice.

francisco gomes de matos: Of the many arts in which human beings can excel, DIGNITY is the art of Linda Hartling: We love artists, dear Vibeke! We sometimes call ourselves "global social artists."

Rosario Galvan: I wouldn't leave behind the important specification of MUTUAL when defining the relational quality of dignity that really dignifies all parties involved. That's where Linda made her emphasis in her presentation, and where I cannot agree more.

francisco gomes de matos: treating one another well

Hayal Köksal: If we internalize it well we then might be the angels of dignity.

francisco gomes de matos: yes, but let's prioritize the victims of INdignity, too.

Virginia Swain: Thanks, Linda--to me, that means every person present must be deeply respected and heard so that Rosario's somatic empathy can be experienced. IS there a way in the future to have an event like this structured so that everyone in the room can at least say their name--to bring them into the room by acknowledging their presence!

Linda Hartling: Yes, mutuality is a very useful term. Jean Baker Miller would emphasize "moving toward mutuality" in relationships!

francisco gomes de matos: This very moment, how many planetary citizens are being treated in unjust, undignified, dehumanizing ways?

Linda Hartling: It is WONDERFUL to see you Kjell!!!!

Linda Hartling: WE LOVED OUR MEETING IN 2008!!!

Takis Ioannides: I consider that dignity is interwoven with the life-experience, the beliefs, the clean and incompatible conscience, the education, the praxis and practices of each person

Wellington: We have to stand for those without voice

Linda Hartling: Never doubt that a small a committed group of citizens can change the world...We are that dignicomunity!!!

Rosario Galvan: To TAKI from ATHENS: How do you say "soma" in Greek and what does it refer to that is beyond physical body?

Lynn King: this university will create global dignity mindset

Linda Hartling: Yes, dear Wellington, we have to stand for those without a voice. Invisibility is agonizingly humiliating!

Virginia Swain: I would like to greet Hroar Klempe, who I see sitting in the room, acknowledging his presence, although he is not speaking. Evelin introduced us when he was a visiting scholar at Clark University this year --his presence in my life was so important to dignity--and he is just now publishing his book on the history of psychology and Kirgegaard--even though you are not speaking, I am so grateful to Evellin for introducing me to a member of the Human Dignity Network in my own city!

vibeke Muasya: How are you going to put your voice outside the circle to the ones who suppress ?

Takis Ioannides: yes soma means the body, but not only this Katrina Vrebalovich: focus on what we want not give energy to what we don't want.. The perpetuation of the negative cannot change things it keeps us down.

Rosario Galvan: Evelin is speaking of the ZEN practice for a world dignity university: empty ourselves from pre-conceived perceptions and come ready to let regret and frustration behind and work actively toward positive empowering images of the future. We must create spaces for acknowledgment of wrong-doings and grievances process though, this is key in my view, move on to positive messages of the future without alienating those who still feel unheard and unseen. How to do both?

Linda Hartling: Dear Katrina, focusing on what we want and not putting energy into what we don't want is crucial!

Wellington: Yes, Linda, we have to teach dignity in our schools. Children must grow with the principle of respecting each other

vibeke Muasya: YES Linda and Katrina

Katrina Vrebalovich: yes acknowledgement is key before the negative can be moved out.

vibeke Muasya: Wellington ... they have in Denmark since the 70's but still racism is worse than ever Hayal Köksal: yes and perhaps collaborative camping program for international gatherings might be helpful for our kids.

Linda Hartling: Yes, dear Wellington, we must teach dignity in our schools!

vibeke Muasya: childrens minds are build around the dinnertable

Katrina Vrebalovich: we have to work to get rid of the barriers that keep us from knowing each other when kept in separation we fear . We fear what we don't know

vibeke Muasya: KAtrina that is SO true

Rosario Galvan: I am deeply thankful to and acknowledge Virginia Swain for introducing me to Evelin and her radiant modeling of open-hearted and shared leadership.

Katrina Vrebalovich: All walls must come down with trust that your children are also mine and my children yours and you are my son and daughter and I am yours. this picture changes every thing

Wellington: Viebke, we face the same problem in Brazil with the youth....they seem to be more conservative than ever! So I think that we should start teaching them since their childhood.

Linda Hartling: I'm enjoying our speakers in Oslo!!

Hayal Köksal: me, too.

Anja Tiller: Congrats Evelin and all. A huge applause from me, the presentations and discussions are great and so is the new technology. It is a wonderful topic and launch of The Human Dignity University.

vibeke Muasya: wellington yes and the artists have a very strong influence on these kids - bigger than teachers

vibeke Muasya: I wish this kind of gathering would spill over into the creative community

Katrina Vrebalovich: It is spilling over my lifes work is about empowerment through art

Virginia Swain: My pleasure, Rosario! I am so grateful to the last speaker who spoke of the need for the healing on the wound of humiliation which forms the basis of this network. I'm so sorry I did not hear your name. Would you be wiling to contact me later? May I also greet Magnus Haavelsrud whom I met through Patricia and Jerry Mische's Global Education Network at the United Nations vibeke Muasya: we all have a task of creating greater AWARENESS of our existence so we can embrace ourselves and therby other into the ONE

Wellington: Yes, the artists, teachers, family. We have to get the society together in order to change this situation

Katrina Vrebalovich: I just participated in an incredible exhibition here in Cairo called neighbors

Linda Hartling: Wonderful comments!

Bayezid Dawla: Wonderful speech!!!

vibeke Muasya: Katrina I just did the same her in Copenhagen! BEautiful!!

Yves M. Musoni: Dignity is the key to understand many challenges of our 21st century open world.

Katrina Vrebalovich: fantastic Vibeke! We do our medicine in our way

Linda Hartling: Dignity is the key!!

Takis Ioannides: I published an essay I wrote for dignity in the newspaper I write in Athens, especially for the youths, who are our future citizens, our hope.

Linda Hartling: Greetings to Mariana!

Bayezid Dawla: "Dignity is the key to understand many challenges of our 21st century open world." This is abosultely right.

Wellington: I'm launching here in Recife Brazil a research project involving human dignity associated with second language teaching for those who are learning a new language and culture.

vibeke Muasya: yes Katrina I find it very important ... to DO .. to eat in your neighbors house!

Virginia Swain: Thank you so much Mariana for representing all of us who were at the conference at Columbia last December and for your inspiring words--your understanding of human dignity is so important hayal köksal: it is interesting Wellington. I would like to learn more.

Linda Hartling: I love hearing about the ways people are working for dignity!

hayal köksal: I also would like to share dignity based project with you all.

Magnus Haavelsrud: Thank you for greetings Virginia - good to 'meet' again - I think we now experience a new form of dialogue. I am participating this meeting with a friend, Inge M. Nilsen, who just published a book entitled 'Dialogens mange former' - in English 'The many forms of dialogue' and we jokingly commented that he needed to add this new form next time he revises the text. Congratulations to all - I think we are experienceing the future together

Chipamong Chowdhury: I think, Rosario Galvan, not emptying the pre-conceived perception (because pre-conception itself empty of itself), but learning from it, there will be a way reconcile the both.

Tony: I'm sitting here in the Blue Mountains West of Sydney listening and watching the comments - and the thought arises that true dignity is impossible without an element (from the other end of the shame spectrum from humiliation) - that of Humility - without which dignity becomes pompous. particularly following the British Crisis Consultant speaking of the experience that Rosario Galvan: I am with Mike, "the Brit" as he introduced himself -last speaker, that the way ahead is reconciliation. No wonder people strike back or fall deep into despair when they are told "you must not feel humiliated". Talking down never help people transform their wounds, but compassionate listening, deep empathy, and respectful acknowledgment of "their feelings". We may be adults but our unruly feelings remind us we are not so grown-up at the subconscious level. This is the level of our psyche responsive to love, care, arts, intuition, play. That's why the university must emphasize left-brain activities and methodologies. Youth all over the world will jump in to the opportunity, I'm sure.

Takis Ioannides: even children are giving lessons about dignity to us, the adults, like a 10 years old orphan boy in the disaster of Japan.

Katrina Vrebalovich: Vibeke when we bring things down to the simplest of commonality sharing a meal is one of the greatest symbols. I love that in Africa salt is the bond of protection and friendship Virginia Swain: I also would like to acknowledge Michael Britton, an important voice in the HDS network who became a board member of our NGO and whose presence always uplifts me. Michael models empathy and the presence of dignity.

Wellington: Yes Hayal I'm having the support of Prof. Gomes de Matos. You can contact us whenever you want that we will be pleased to tell you more!

Linda Hartling: Humility is very, very important for our efforts, dear Tony!!!

hayal köksal: Thank you. hayal@boun.edu.tr

Milika Matiti: Milika Matiti: Universities and other institutions have an important role to teach and help students to reflect on the concept of dignity.. Students need to explore the concept as it is abstract, They need to explore influencing factors, and how to dignify themselves and others

Wellington: Yes... wellingtonlira@hotmail.com

Katrina Vrebalovich: Linda will we be able to see this on youtube later?

Linda Hartling: I believe will be able to see this online later, dear Katrina!

vibeke Muasya: heard Rosario

Katrina Vrebalovich: wonderful I send love to you and am so honored to be a part of a new age.

hayal köksal: Human voice should be used to initiate dignity in minds and spirits.

Takis Ioannides: Lessons of dignity by a boy in Japan <http://newamericamedia.org/2011/03/letter-from-fukushima-a-vietnamese-japanese-police-officers-account.php>)

Chipamong Chowdhury: I see you myself in your eyes,,,,, feel great....

Gary Jones: not alone and continually inspired by the collective goodness of you all; I am honoured to be a part of you all

Rosario Galvan: Chipamong, thanks for your correction. Yes, pre-whatever empties itself, absolutely. I share intent with all of you we can be awake enough to learn from previous prejudices without taking so long that many others suffer in the meantime. Emptying the mind though a quieting practice can help to become more readily awake for the needs of the moment.

Thank you for listening!

Linda Hartling: Hooray for collective goodness, dear Gary!

Milika Matiti: It was perfect . Thanks !!!!! Well done!!
