Background

Dignity Press and World Dignity University Press are affiliated with both the World Dignity University and the Human Dignity and Humiliation Studies network. We publish books and journals addressing Human Dignity, Human Rights, Human Development and related matters. Books may be of scholarly nature or addressing a wider audience. Works of academic nature are published under the imprint World Dignity University Press.

In line with the principles of the HumanDHS network, Dignity Press operates on a non-profit base. All proceeds from publishing are solely used to support the work of the HumanDHS network. Editorial and administrative work at Dignity Press is done by volunteers.

The team of Dignity Press includes:

- Linda Hartling (Director)
- Uli Spalthoff (Director of Operations)
- Evelin Lindner (Program Development)
- Amy Hudnall (Principal Editor Journal of Human Dignity and Humiliation Studies)

Dignity Press is looking for volunteers with publishing experience!

Editorial Policy

We publish books (and in future a journal) which contribute to research and education loosely related to Human dignity and humiliation. They may relate to:

- Human rights
- Psychology and Social Psychology
- Sociology
- Educational Science
- Global and local development
- Concepts for a just economy
- Personal development, to name just a few from a wide range of disciplines.

Scholarly books can be published under the imprint World Dignity University Press. We accept manuscripts with high quality regarding relevance, originality and language. Manuscripts are approved by the Dignity Press team and usually at least one external reviewer.

We are generally publishing books in English language. Another language is possible if an editor for this language is found for the publishing process.

Our publishing contract allows authors to choose the copyright terms. We encourage authors to publish under a Creative Commons licence.
